Mayor's budget focuses on progressive agenda

Big money. Mayor de Blasio revealed more details about his $74 billion budget on Thursday.

Bill de Blasio laid out his vision for the city budget at an event at City Hall. / ROB BENNETT, OFFICE OF THE MAYOR

More details behind Mayor Bill de Blasio's first-ever budget came out on Thursday, as he released his $73.9 billion executive budget.

Much like during his preliminary budget release in February, the mayor framed his administration's financial goals as ones centered around a progressive budget.

"There is nothing unprogressive about being fiscally prudent," de Blasio said, harkening back to his long-standing commitment to reduce New York City's income inequality. "In fact, it's necessary."

De Blasio described the city's economy as generally strong, crediting his predecessor, former mayor Michael Bloomberg, for diversifying the economy. He also noted that the city had mostly rebounded from the 2008 economic collapse.

Much of the mayor's cautious optimism for the city's economy rests on his progressive priorities, including his battle for universal prekindergarten and his recently unveiled plan for affordable housing.

Real values

"There is nothing unprogressive about being fiscally prudent."

Mayor Bill de Blasio

The prekindergarten program is slated to receive $300 million for the next fiscal year, and $340 million for the following. On top of its broader goals for affordable housing released Monday, the administration said it would commit $70 million to the Housing Authority to address the repair backlog and improve security within public housing.

Vision Zero, the administration's plan to eliminate pedestrian deaths, will see some $28.8 million designated toward speed cameras, slow zones and intersection redesigns. NYPD would receive $13 million toward its own traffic initiatives.

The budget also allocates $110 million that will be spread out over three years to repair two as-of-yet unidentified New York Police Department precincts and build a new station house for the Bronx's 40th Precinct.

And while the three precincts might get an upgrade, the mayor pushed back on a city council-driven initiative to hire 1,000 new officers.

De Blasio told reporters that he understood the council's request was "heartfelt" but that the administration was confident it could do without more cops on the beat.

In response, Bronx City Councilwoman and Public Safety Committee Chair Vanessa Gibson called today's announcement an "opening chapter and that she was hopeful "the administration will see the urgency of adding additional police to address the public safety needs of communities throughout the city."

Small business

De Blasio said the budget was drafted to lessen financial burdens on small businesses, projecting fines collected by the Department of Health and the Department of Consumer Affairs to decrease to $789 million — an eight percent drop from 2012 levels.

- "This is about stabilizing small business and helping small business to create more jobs," he said.
- The mayor announced a $226 million commitment to repair 1,000 lane miles around the city, and another $346 million toward maintaining and rehabilitating local bridges.

Report. Brooklyn sees gains in design sector

As the design sector becomes more important to the city's economy, Brooklyn has seen the largest increase in the number of design firms recently, according to an analysis published on Thursday.

From a recession low in 2010, the number of employees at city design firms increased nearly 10 percent by 2012, a Center for an Urban Future report found.

At nearly 3,000 firms employing more than 21,000 people, Manhattan remains the center of the city's design sector.

But between 2003 and 2012, Brooklyn experienced a 101 percent spike in the number of design firms. The number of firms in Manhattan only increased six percent.

Anti-Semitic graffiti, fire used to vandalize homes

Four vandals who spray-painted anti-Semitic graffiti on a Brooklyn home were caught on camera shooting fireballs at trees and cars last week, police said.

The four unidentified suspects painted the offensive graffiti on an Exeter Street property in Manhattan Beach around 12:30 a.m. last Saturday, according to the NYPD.

Police didn't say what the anti-Semitic graffiti said or depicted. The incident occurred the same day a NYPD officer sprayed more than 20 anti-Semitic messages throughout Brooklyn, authorities said.

Surveillance footage provided by police shows the vandals walking down a street in the area while one suspect uses what appears to be a spray can and lighter to shoot flames at a tree, car and utility box. ANNA SANDERS

New city commissioners

Leaders. The commissioners are the ones that will help shape the direction of the city going forward.

Mayor Bill de Blasio has made several top appointments in the first few months since he took over the office in January. Metro looks back at some of the choices he has made so far.

These are the people who make sure that we are safe, that our trash is picked up, that our children are educated, our roads are safe and that our parks remain the crown jewels of the five boroughs.

They are the ones who fine-tune the engine that drives the greatest city in the world.

METRO

Dept. of Parks and Recreation Commissioner

Mitchell Silver

Mitchell Silver / ROB BENNETT

The Parks Department oversees 29,000 acres of park land and 1,900 parks. Silver, formerly an urban planner in North Carolina, seems to be bringing a populist outsider perspective to the role that is aligned with de Blasio's goal of addressing inequality in the city's parks. Park space in poorer neighborhoods is often run solely with city funds, while high-profile green spaces in wealthy neighborhoods, such as Central Park and Prospect Park, receive millions in private donations.

Unique perspective

"I am a planner. And as a planner, I look at parks very differently. Parks do not sit in isolation."

Department of Sanitation Commissioner

Kathryn Garcia

Kathryn Garcia
GETTY IMAGES

Garcia previously served as the COO of the Department of Environmental Protection, where de Blasio credited her with saving tens of millions of dollars by increasing efficiency. Her appointment earlier this year came on the heels of a great deal of criticism directed at her predecessor John Doherty, who was blamed for slow snow cleanup after a series of snowstorms. Looking ahead, Sanitation's emphasis is shifting more toward recycling and composting. This isn't her first time working for the department, though it has been a while.

Taking out the trash

"I fell in love with garbage and recycling [as a Sanitation intern twenty years ago]."

Garcia said when she was appointed

Dept. of Health and Mental Hygiene Commissioner

Mary Bassett

Bill de Blasio disagrees with his predecessor on many things, but one area where they share a great deal in common is their take on public health. Dr. Mary T. Bassett is a former top Bloomberg administration health official who looks set to continue her former boss's anti-smoking and anti-obesity crusade, tempered by her new boss's emphasis on keeping communities involved in the decisions that will affect them.

Healthy outlook

"Health is such a critical resource for everything we do in life, so it stands to reason that communities should be our ally in this process." Bassett

NYPD Commissioner

Bill Bratton

This is Bill Bratton's second tenure as police commissioner, having previously served in the same role during 1994 to 1996, a much more dangerous and crime-ridden era of New York City.

Last month, in a sign Bratton is moving away from the post-9/11 practices of former Commissioner Ray Kelly, the NYPD disbanded a program that collected intelligence on area Muslims.

He has also cut down on the controversial practice of stop-and-frisk, but has no intention of doing away with it completely.

"[Stop-and-frisk] will remain a very basic tool in this police department, but it will be done at all times constitutionally, it will be done at all times respectfully and it will be done at all times compassionately," he said.

Schools Chancellor

Carmen Farina

Carmen Farina oversees the Department of Education, which handles all of New York City's public schools.

Since taking the reins, she has faced criticism over the decision to keep schools open during snowy weather and was called tone-deaf for her observation that it was "an absolutely beautiful day out there."

She put her foot in her mouth again when she told reporters that nearly 200 Harlem students were "on their own" after the city planned to kick them out of their charter school.

In April, the city's pre-kindergarten program was expanded to include an additional 4,268 seats, the first push toward an end goal of universal pre-kindergarten.

Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development Commissioner

Vicki Been

Before her appointment, Been served as the Director of NYU's Furman Center for Real Estate and Urban Policy, where she did research on the housing affected by Hurricane Sandy. She has been tasked with implementing de Blasio's Five Borough Housing Plan, which aims to create or preserve 200,000 affordable homes and apartments over the next 10 years. The $41 billion plan, just released Monday, was well-received by both affordable-housing activists and developers.

Asking more of developers

"The plan really tries to tackle those high construction costs and high permitting costs, but at the same time it makes clear we are going to ask more of the developers by trying to stretch our dollars further." Been

Dept. of Transportation Commissioner

Polly Trottenberg
ROB BENNETT

Polly Trottenberg

The department is tasked with maintaining the transportation infrastructure, including 6,000 miles of streets and highways and over 12,000 miles of sidewalk, as well as thousands of street signs, lights and traffic signals. Her greatest challenge may be implementing the mayor's "Vision Zero" safety plan, which aims to eliminate traffic fatalities. As part of the plan, Trottenberg's agency has announced several initiatives, including introducing new slow zones and pedestrian safety education measures. The department also made an interactive map to track New Yorkers' experiences on city streets.

No fatalities

"Through Vision Zero, we're going to challenge ourselves to do more to take our safety efforts to the next level, working closely with our partners throughout the city." Trottenberg

Dept. of Environmental Protection Commissioner

Emily Lloyd

This is Lloyd's second stint as DEP Commissioner. She previously served from 2005 to 2009, when the watershed protection programs she oversaw earned New York City the distinction of being one of only five cities in the United States where most of the water supply does not require filtration. She was re-appointed in February, and since then the administration has proposed the most extensive overhauls to the city's Air Pollution Control Code in nearly four decades, targeting boiler efficiency and emissions from food trucks, among other things.

Emily Lloyd / GETTY IMAGES

Cleaner air

"By phasing out the use of the dirtiest heating oils and increasing the efficiency of boilers, we will continue to build on the progress that has seen dramatic reductions in air pollution in New York City." Lloyd

Office of Cultural Affairs Commissioner

Tom Finkelpearl

The Cultural Affairs office is tasked with promoting arts and culture throughout the five boroughs, continuing what Mayor de Blasio called a rich history that attracts residents and tourists alike to the city.

A former executive of the Queens Museum, Finkelpearl will oversee a $156 million budget that divvies money up between various cultural institutions and projects.

Tom Finkelpearl / ROB BENNETT

Promoting arts and culture

"What happens on the community level with artists in all the neighborhoods of New York City [is] something extremely valuable, moving; that's good for communities. And I intend to try to understand how we can best express that value." Finkelpearl

Dept. of Consumer Affairs Commissioner

Julie Menin

The department is responsible for consumer protection and ensuring a fair and vibrant marketplace.

Under the de Blasio administration, Menin has pledged to ease punitive fines on and enhance engagement with small businesses in all five boroughs.

Menin heads the agency overseeing the recently expanded paid sick-leave law, covering 500,000 more New Yorkers. Previously she was the former Chairperson of Community Board 1.

Protecting New Yorkers

"This department must protect New Yorkers from scams and deceptions designed to take advantage of the innocent." Menin

Hammer attack at C station

A man was attacked with a hammer and robbed Wednesday at a Brooklyn subway station, police said.

The 32-year-old victim was trying to buy a MetroCard at the Rockaway C train station about 9:20 p.m.

An assailant approached the man and attacked him with the hammer. He then demanded money. The victim gave his attacker the $140 he had in cash before the hammer-wielding robber fled, according to police.

Hoops. Fans design shirts for Brooklyn Nets playoff games

After a last-minute call for T-shirt designs, the Brooklyn Nets announced that two fans will see their submissions handed out at a sold-out playoff game next week.

The Nets gave fans eight hours to come up with designs on Tuesday. By Wednesday, the team revealed it had received some 150 submissions before whittling it down to two top contenders.

On Saturday at the Barclays Center, free shirts designed by Raya Lim of Passaic, New Jersey, will be passed out. Those at Game 3 can expect to get either a black or white version of Lim's Brooklyn "B" tee.

DISAPPEARING LEWINSKY

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

TOM FOREMAN IS A POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN.

If you want to start a fight faster than a cat in a kennel, just utter the name Monica Lewinsky in mixed company. Or maybe you can whip out a copy of the new Vanity Fair, because almost 20 years after she worked on some "special-interest projects" with President Clinton, the D.C. pundits are baring their fangs over her essay in the magazine.

The article says she's tired of hiding, tired of being "that woman" and tired of living her life in the shadow of a scandal. "So why in heaven's name are you bringing it up again?" her critics shout, furious about the impact on a possible Hillary Clinton campaign. Lewinsky essentially says people still point, they still giggle and they still whisper, so this is an attempt to reclaim her story.

I have some doubts about this strategy.

But I also have some other ideas if she truly wants to ride off into the sunset.

For starters, she needs to change her name. She needs one you can easily forget, such as Claire Jones or Allison Smith. The main thing: Don't make it easy for people to know who you are, even when they spot you. "Say, aren't you..."

Quoted

"To be sure, none of this is fair, and I can't help but have some sympathy for anyone who spends a lifetime paying for a foolish mistake of youth."

"Yes! I'm Lady Gaga! Want an autograph?"

Second: She says she is spotted every day in cities such as New York, Los Angeles and London. To paraphrase an old joke, "then don't live in places like that." I'd suggest moving to International Falls in the winter. Between your parka and scarves, you'll be more anonymous than a bank robber.

And third: Quit writing for the media, appearing in the media or answering phone calls from the media.

Monica Lewinsky / GETTY IMAGES

To be sure, none of this is fair, and I can't help but have some sympathy for anyone who spends a lifetime paying for a foolish mistake of youth, especially when it was undeniably not all her fault. But D.C. power players can be very tough, and the only refuge may be in places where power and politics don't matter as much.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author.

Health secretary nominee pledges bipartisan approach

Sylvia Mathews Burwell pledged on Thursday to take a fresh, bipartisan approach to Congress on the law known as Obamacare, one of the most divisive issues in domestic politics, if confirmed by the Senate as the new health secretary.

At a hearing expected to be charged with congressional election rhetoric about President Barack Obama's health care law, Burwell said she would build on her record as the current White House budget director by working closely with lawmakers on "our shared priorities" and finding solutions to issues that "transcend parties."

"I have made responses to and engagement with Congress a priority — working with members on both sides of the aisle to drive toward progress on the issues we all care deeply about," Burwell said in written testimony to the Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee.

SYLVIA MATHEWS BURWELL /GETTY IMAGES

She also described the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act in new, upbeat terms, saying the law has strengthened the economy and the middle class — two vital issues for Democratic candidates in November's midterm elections that Republicans are trying to turn into a referendum on Obamacare. REUTERS

How to get more out of your doctor's appointment

See more at www.metro.us

National Nurses Week. Roslynn Aquino, a nurse at LIJ, gives us tips.

A trip to the doctor's office is often an uncomfortable experience, usually because we are either unwell, in pain or just inconvenienced. Furthermore, navigating the medical system can be intimidating and confusing. So it stands to reason that one would want to avoid follow-up appointments or multiple trips to the doctor in a calendar year.

Roslynn Aquino, RN, a nurse at North Shore LIJ, has advice on how to make your visit with the doctor more efficient.

Get some advice over the phone

Aquino emphasizes the importance of the support staff when a patient wants to avoid making multiple doctors' appointments. "Most doctors have clinicians that can help," she says. "They answer calls and can triage symptoms over the phone."

Prepare questions in advance

Asking the right questions can also go a long way when trying to get the most out of a trip to the doctor's office. "Write down any questions you have for the doctor ahead of time," Aquino says.

Pro tip

Know what to ask

Even if your visit is just a checkup, be up-to-date with your propensity for certain conditions. "Depending on age and risk factors, you should ask questions such as, 'Do we need to do any blood-screening tests?'" Aquino says.

Your nurse is at the forefront of your care. / DIGITAL VISION

"Sometimes you can get nervous and forget your questions."

Bring important forms

Paperwork is important too. "We'll ask patients to bring all of their medical records with them," she says. That might include gathering reports and images in advance, but don't worry. "We can help with that, as long as we have prior authorization to access the patient's medical records," she says.

Ask about your discharge plan

The appointment's over, but your work might not be. "It's important to get discharge instructions when you leave the hospital so that you know what symptoms to look for once you get home," Aquino says. That includes making sure you have follow-up phone numbers in case you have any questions after you leave.

Nirvana

Today I found my friends

Now Clark is the one onstage while eighth graders watch and smoke menthols. Clark has lately reaped a lot of what she's spent years sowing. Last month she played with Nirvana at their induction into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

"I wouldn't be playing music if not for Nirvana, so it was poignant for me to be up there 20 years after 'Nevermind' came out, playing those songs that changed my life," she says.

SITTING ON TOP OF THE WORLD

See more at www.metro.us

The passion of St. Vincent. Annie Clark takes an elaborate show to festivals all over the planet this summer.

Just because St. Vincent's summer itinerary is packed with more than a dozen festival dates on four different continents doesn't mean that Annie Clark is scaling back the theatrics of the St. Vincent concert experience.

The singer and guitarist will still force herself down a giant set of pink stairs, writhe around amid a storm of strobe lights and eventually command the procession from an oversized pink throne.

"We've worked really hard on this strange fever dream of a show," says Clark, "so it's important that people get the whole experience, even if it's at a festival."

That "strange fever dream of a show," along with the self-titled fifth St. Vincent album, may be the most definitive statement from any artist this year. From Clark's fat guitar leads to her strange and simple lyrics — any of which can be pulled out to illustrate what St. Vincent is all about in 2014 — it feels like the artist has truly discovered her identity.

"I'll always be evolving and be restless and wanting to move violently into the future," says Clark, "but I was reading Miles Davis' autobiography and [he] was saying how the hardest thing about being a musician is to sound like yourself. ... I just thought that this record for me was something where I had successfully created a landscape that was my own."

This landscape also includes conscious choreography and Clark's lavender/gray pseudo old-lady hair.

"Everyone is really obsessed with being young," she says, "and this sort of erroneous idea that things are the best when you are young. I am young, but I wanted to see what it would look like to go in the opposite direction."

Summer memories

Keystone Light tallboys and menthols

Though Clark has a lot of new details to pay attention to with her show, she still has fun at the festivals.

"I definitely get to check out bands that I like and haven't seen live," she says, and "a lot of my friends are musicians, so the only times we get to see each other is when we cross paths backstage at a festival."

As for her own memories of summer concerts, Clark says that highlights included "going with someone's older sister and having her buy us Keystone Light tallboys and sneaking them in our pockets or a purse and then smoking menthol cigarettes.

"I last smoked a cigarette when I saw Luscious Jackson in the '90s," she says. "I was in eighth grade and we thought we were really cool."

St. Vincent is the musical guest on the season finale of "Saturday Night Live" next weekend. She also plays the Celebrate Brooklyn Festival on Aug. 9. / RENATA RAKSHA

The best of the fests

Stacked lineups. Which summer music festivals are worth a plane ticket, and which ones are worth making sure you're close to home for?

Boston Calling

May 23-25 and Sept. 5-7
Boston
www.bostoncalling.com
Boston Calling has amassed some great lineups since debuting last year, and continues to do so with the third and fourth installments. This month's fest features Jack Johnson, Death Cab for Cutie, Modest Mouse and the Decemberists; The National, Lorde, The Replacements and Nas are among the big names on the bill for September.

Summerfest

June 25-29, July 1-6
Milwaukee
www.summerfest.com
Summerfest is Guinness-certified as the world's largest music festival, with more than 800 diverse acts, including Usher, New Order, Lady Gaga and Motley Crue.

Pitchfork Music Festival

July 18-20
Chicago
www.pitchforkmusicfestival.com
Pitchfork not only has a highly regarded music site, but also a highly regarded music festival with alternative, hip-hop and electronic music. Artists include Beck, Grimes, Kendrick Lamar and festival warriors Neutral Milk Hotel (we count 19 festival dates on their summer itinerary).

Play the field

Bonnaroo

June 12-15
Manchester, Tennessee
www.bonnaroo.com
Set on a 700-acre farm in Manchester, Tennessee, Bonnaroo is the playground for the cool kids and hippies, at the same time, on the same field. The best thing about this four-day fest is its eclectic lineup, which includes Jack White, Kanye West and Elton John. Imagine them all getting together for a massive jam!

The crowd at Bonnaroo is a cross between hippie and hipster, but when you're there, none of that matters. / GETTY IMAGES

In our back yard

Governor's Ball

June 6-8
Randall's Island
www.governorsballfestival.com
Heading up this lineup is the band that served as last year's guest editors of Metro, Vampire Weekend, plus Outkast, Jack White and The Strokes.

Electric Zoo

Aug. 29-31
www.electriczoofestival.com
Though drug-related deaths at last year's fest threatened to derail future Electric Zoos, the electronic music fest returns with headliners David Guetta, Knife Party, Kaskade and Armin Van Buuren.

Lollapalooza

Aug. 1-3
www.lollapalooza.com
This year's Lolla, featuring nearly 70 bands on five stages, boasts artists Eminem, Kings of Leon, Lorde, the Arctic Monkeys and Outkast. Outkast maybe this 2014's real festival warriors; they're scheduled to play at least 19 of them. It also should be noted that Outkast do not have any non-festival gigs on their itinerary.

Made In America

Aug. 30-31
Philadelphia
www.madeinamericafest.com
As of press time, the lineup hadn't yet been announced for this Jay Z-founded fest, but an L.A. version happens the same weekend, making people nervous about a watered-down lineup on the East Coast.

Tours de force!

Moonshine Jungle

Bruno Mars

Give him your, give him your, give him your attention, baby. Bruno Mars' second leg of his Moonshine Jungle tour is bigger than the first leg, and Mars is one of those performers who doesn't back down from a big challenge. Look for high-energy choreography, maybe a B.o.B. cover and possibly even a piano solo. Plus, Pharrell Williams is opening! July 14-15, Madison Square Garden

Beyonce and Jay Z

After co-headlining tours with Kanye and JT, Jay Z is finally ready to share the stage with somebody who is indisputably more powerful than he is: his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Carter bring their On the Run tour to only 16 cities this summer, and oddly enough, they don't have a date in their hometown as of press time. But if we didn't include this, the Beygency would get us!

Katy Perry

You're gonna hear her roar! You'll also see six sides of her, as Perry's Prismatic World Tour is divided into six sections (Prismatic, Egyptian, Cat-Oure, Acoustic, Throwback and Hyper Neon). And yes, "Cat-Oure" means she dresses like a cat. So yeah, you're gonna hear her meow, too. July 9, Madison Square Garden; July 24-25, The Barclays Center

ARTPOP Ball

Lady Gaga

"ARTPOP" was a bit of an art-flop, and the last time we saw Gaga on stage, she had somebody puke on her. But what keeps her from being a mere Marilyn Manson for the Twitter generation is that beyond her shock-value antics are loads of banging dance tunes. May 13, Madison Square Garden

Arcade Fire

Canada's most accessible art band have been keeping their sets fun with oddball covers of songs from Boyz II Men and Blondie and having surprise celebs don the big paper mache heads that have been part of the "Reflektor" promotion since last fall. Aug. 22-24, Barclays Center

Queen + Adam Lambert

The best way to experience the music of Queen in a live setting these days is with two musicians who actually played in the band — Roger Taylor and Bryan May — fronted by "Idol" alum Adam Lambert, who seven years ago tried out for that competition with an a capella version of "Bohemian Rhapsody." July 17, Madison Square Garden

Characters

Meet Vanessa and Ethan

Josh Hartnett and Eva Green
JONATHAN HESSION, SHOWTIME

Vanessa (Eva Green) is a medium whose gifts bring together the characters around her. "She's a beautiful heroine," says Green. "She's kind of a rebel. It's such a repressed time ... and she's very hungry for life. All her five senses are very much alive, tingling all the time. But it's Victorian times, so it's always the conflict inside her."

Ethan (Josh Hartnett) is a sharpshooting American whose skills may prove useful to his new companions. "Ethan has been working in a Wild West show. It's not necessarily the top Wild West show; it's kind of a second-tier Wild West show," Hartnett says. "He finds himself in London in the middle of this intriguing situation, and he decides to stick around and see what happens. We don't know why, really, and that's why you have to watch the show."

Major monster mashup

Showtime. "Penny Dreadful" weaves together the stories of classic horror characters.

Catch Showtime's "Penny Dreadful" on Sundays at 10 p.m. / JONATHAN HESSION, SHOWTIME

Not many television series credit the poetry of William Wordsworth as a creative starting point. But Showtime's new psychosexual horror drama "Penny Dreadful" is unlike most other TV shows.

Created by screenwriter John Logan ("Gladiator," "The Aviator"), "Penny Dreadful" weaves together some of literature's iconic horror characters while reimagining their stories in Victorian-era London. Logan says he got caught up in reading romantic poetry about 10 years ago when Wordsworth led him to Mary Shelley and a rereading of "Frankenstein."

"I was just very provoked by it," he says. "And I started thinking about the themes and why, almost 200 years after it was written, are we still reading 'Frankenstein.'

"I think it's because the monsters break my heart. And personally speaking, growing up as a gay man before it was as socially acceptable as it is now, I knew what it was to feel different, to feel alienated. But the very same thing that made me monstrous to some people also empowered me and made me who I was."

Logan, a self-proclaimed "monster geek," took inspiration from Universal's classic horror films of the 1940s. "Penny Dreadful" brings Dr. Victor Frankenstein (Harry Treadaway) and Dorian Gray (Reeve Carney) into contact with new characters Vanessa Ives (Eva Green), a mysterious woman in touch with the supernatural, and Ethan Chandler (Josh Hartnett), an American hired gun running away from a checkered past.

Logan chose to set the story in London circa 1891 for reasons beyond the cool costumes and ominous streets. "There's something about the Victorian era that reminds me of right now, because they were on the cusp of a modern world," Logan says. "They were grappling with the very elemental question of what it is to be human. ... It's frightening and there's dissonance, and there's excitement to uncharted waters," for both us and these characters — "that's what makes good drama."

Activism through art

China. Ai Weiwei's exhibit at the Brooklyn Museum blends philosophy with protestation.

"Colored Vases" is a display of artifacts destroyed in the name of political activism. The exhibit is on display at the Brooklyn Museum (200 Eastern Parkway) through Aug. 10. Visit www.brooklynmuseum.org for more information. / PROVIDED

Chinese artist Ai Weiwei has perfected the craft of activist art. With over 40 works spanning 20 years, "Ai Weiwei: According to What?" shows the artist's interdisciplinary career.

Raised during the Cultural Revolution (1966-75), Weiwei appropriates China's historical past and present to create large installations that bring attention to its future.

Weiwei utilizes woodworking techniques of the Han Dynasty — when engineering was used, rather than screws, to fasten furniture — in pieces such as "Moon Chest" (2008). Seven chests built from huali — the wood of the Chinese quince tree — are placed in a row. Each has four circular openings, fashioned after a waning moon.

Other notable pieces are "Colored Vases" (2007-10) and "Dropping a Han Dynasty Urn" (1995). Each work involves defaming historical artifacts through industrial paint or literal destruction.

Weiwei's peaceful yet political demonstrations have repercussions: In 2011, he was arrested for alleged economic crimes. His time behind bars is memorialized in "Selfie" (2011), which he took in police elevators en route to his 81-day detention.

Comedy. Seth Rogen pulls Zac Efron into his comedy orbit

Inside every Judd Apatow and Apatow-related product, buried under a metric ton of dirty jokes and weed talk, lies deep-seated anxiety about aging, mediocrity and mortality. Apatow's "This Is 40" was billed as a "semi-sequel" to "Knocked Up," but the real spiritual follow-up is "Neighbors." Here, Seth Rogen's Mac not only has an infant but a suburban home, a soul-sucking desk job and no energy for nightlife. He's living the nightmare Rogen's character likely had in "Knocked Up," and when a raucous frat, led by a terminally shirtless Zac Efron, moves next door, Mac can only seem like the boring, uptight enemy: the bleak future of hangovers and Container Stores that awaits them.

A call to the cops during a late weeknight kegger leads to an all-out war between the two factions. Mac isn't in it alone; he's joined, every step, by his wife Kelly (Rose Byrne), who refuses to fill the stereotype of the nagging wife. They're both giant children and not very smart.

Kelly is still a guy's invention — the wife who joins in on the fun and is just as freaked out as the guy is when the breast pump breaks and she requires milking. But for a female to have fun without being a ball-breaker is big in the expanded Apatow universe, and Byrne — a serious actress who revealed surprising comic powers in "Bridesmaids" — frequently steals the picture.

Efron does some scene-stealing, too, if only because he's in the role he was born to play. Efron's Teddy is the kind of guy who went to college only to extend the partying he did in high school. He's not intelligent, though some of his "brothers" — including his bestie, played by Dave Franco — are, and he knows that his days are numbered. It's a natural fit for Efron, who oozes a classic Rob Lowe vibe, meaning he'll be even funnier when he winds up on an NBC sitcom in his 40s. MATT PRIGGE

1 Justin Bieber fires back in Seth Rogen feud

It's on: Seth Rogen has become one of the first celebrities to call out Justin Bieber on his crap.

The comedian says his Bieber-related distaste goes back to the early days of Bieber fever. Bieber and Rogen were both backstage at a German talk show when word came that Bieber had requested to meet the comedian. "I was like, 'Sure, I'll meet him,'" Rogen told Howard Stern.

"So I went outside to meet him, and he was acting like I'd asked to meet HIM! It was very nonchalant, 'Yo, man. What's up?' and I was like, 'What the f—, I don't give a f— about [you], I don't want to meet you. Don't act all nonplussed to meet me. I didn't want to meet you. I was totally cool not meeting you. … I was like, fine, I wouldn't have said anything, [but] I was like, 'He's a bit of a motherf—er.'"

Today Bieber responded via Twitter, casting the incident in a different light.

"Sorry I didn't bow down when I asked 2 meet u was probably a bit shy and didn't want to be over the top but still. love ur movies."

Aww. I might be inclined to believe that he was just shy, if I hadn't heard literally dozens of stories about him acting like a rude little punk.

Nice try, though!

Katy Perry kicks off world tour

Wednesday night in Belfast, Katy Perry kicked off her first world tour since she ended her California Dream Tour — way back in January. The singer underwent nine costume changes for her Prismatic World Tour, changing in and out of colorful designer duds by Valentino, Roberto Cavalli and Jeremy Scott for Moschino. No word on who did this "Cats"-themed getup, however.

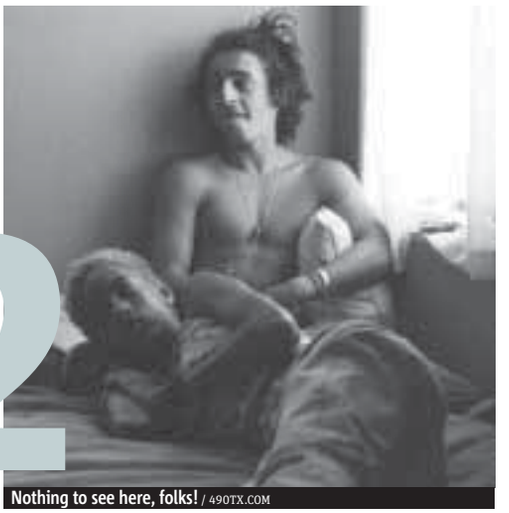
2 Jada Pinkett-Smith defends controversial Willow Smith pic



Nothing to see here, folks! / 490TX.COM

Willow Smith's mom, Jada Pinkett-Smith, has strong feelings about photos of her 13-year-old daughter in bed with an adult man: She's strongly cool with it.

Pictures surfaced earlier this week of Willow Smith in bed with her friend, 20-year-old Moises Arias. It's not as bad as it sounds at first blush: Willow is fully clothed (though Arias is shirtless), and they don't appear to be touching. But we're still talking a kid in bed with a grown man, which was enough to make the Internet uncomfortable.

Willow's mom Jada insists the pic is fine. "Here's the deal: There was nothing sexual about that picture or that situation," she told TMZ. "You guys are projecting your trash onto it, and you're acting like covert pedophiles, and that's not cool."

Indeed, a look at Arias' website reveals that this pic is nothing special: He's got tons of snapshots of his friends, and also he pretty much never wears a shirt. All I know is that if my mom had seen a picture of me like that when I was 13, arrests would have been made. Possibly hers, for murder.

Climate consensus

Re: 'The sand's getting hot, so don't bury your head in it' (Metro, May 7) I admire the fortitude of letter writer Carl Hanson, who claims to have read the latest National Climate Assessment, a document of over 1,000 pages. If he had read more carefully, he would have noticed that the report compares the average temperatures from 1991-2013 with those for the period 1901-1960. The average for the cooling trend from 1961-1990 is omitted. If the missing data were included, the numbers would show a modest decline in average over the last 50 years. SEAN O'ROURKE, VIA EMAIL

Re: 'Cool the debate on global warming' (Metro, May 8) Contrary to letter writer Ori Feinberg's assertions, the American Association of Petroleum Geologists does not endorse the concept of manmade global warming and only "quibbles" about its extent. The Climate Change page of its website notes that in the last 10,000 years it has been both far cooler and far warmer than it is today, and that while certain climate change simulation models predict warming, any such warming may be within natural variations in climate. In short, they are skeptics. They do say that research into climate change should continue. RON SHELTON, VIA EMAIL

Nets look lost as they fall behind 0-2 against Heat

NBA playoffs. The Nets return to Brooklyn this weekend trying to get on the board against Miami.

Deron Williams could probably hear the boos from Brooklyn.

The supposed franchise player put up a complete dud in Game 2 of the Eastern Conference semifinals as the Nets lost 94-82.

Williams was scoreless in a playoff game — after Kevin Garnett did the same in the series opener — for the first time in his career.

For all the talk of superstars Williams, Paul Pierce and Garnett, it was Mirza Teletovic who tried to keep the Nets from falling behind 2-0 in the series.

Teletovic started 4-for-4 from 3-point range in the first half and finished with a team-high 20 points.

But it was Williams and Garnett who came up small. Williams finished 0-for-9, while Garnett was 2-for-8 and scored just four points.

Ray Allen had 13 points — 11 in the second half — for his second-straight big game off the bench. LeBron James led all scorers with 22 points, while Chris Bosh had 18 points and six boards.

Schedule

- Game 1: Heat 107, Nets 86
- Game 3: at Nets, Saturday, 8 p.m., ABC
- Game 4: at Nets, May 12, 8 p.m., TNT
- Game 5: at Heat, May 14, TBD
- Game 6: at Nets, May 16, TBD
- Game 7: at Heat, May 18, TBD

NFL Draft. Giants go with LSU receiver Beckham as top pick

Some surprises at the top of the NFL Draft meant the Giants had plenty of options at No. 12 overall. They liked Odell Beckham Jr. best.

The LSU wide receiver may end up being the replacement for Hakeem Nicks, who departed for Indianapolis in free agency this offseason.

Beckham, 21, came out early after playing three seasons at Louisiana State. His junior season was his best, but he produced right off the bat as a freshman as well.

Beckham had 59 catches for 1,152 yards and eight touchdowns last season. In the three years combined he had 12 touchdowns.

The 6-foot, 187-pound receiver was also a dynamic return man for the Tigers. He had two touchdown returns on punts in 2012 and averaged 26.2 yards per kickoff return last season.

Tight end Eric Ebron, a player pundits speculated the Giants could take had gone at No. 10 to Detroit, but Notre Dame tackle Zack Martin and Pitt defensive tackle Aaron Donald were still available. MARK OSBORNE

Jets select safety Pryor in first round

The question over whether the Jets would finally go offense or stick with defense was answered with a pick sure to make head coach Rex Ryan happy.

The Jets picked Louisville safety Calvin Pryor at No. 18 in the first round. The 5-foot-11, 207-pounder came out a year early for the draft. He had seven career interceptions, but was also a big-hitter. The Jets played Antonio Allen at free safety in 2013.

Jadeveon Clowney went No. 1 overall to Houston, while the Jaguars picked Blake Bortles at No. 3 as the first QB off the board. METRO

Honor roll

Yankees to retire Torre's No. 6, honor others with plaques

The Yankees have the dubious honor of being mocked for retiring too many numbers. They'll inch one step closer to hanging up every number from 1 to 10 this summer.

The team announced Thursday they will retire former manager Joe Torre's No. 6 at a ceremony on Aug. 23. He will also receive a plaque in Monument Park.

The only number remaining to be retired between 1 and 10 will now be No. 2 — soon to be retired for captain Derek Jeter. Former manager Billy Martin (No. 1), Babe Ruth (No. 3), Lou Gehrig (No. 4), Joe DiMaggio (No. 5), Torre (No. 6), Mickey Mantle (No. 7), Bill Dickey and Yogi Berra (No. 8), Roger Maris (No. 9) and Phil Rizzuto (No. 10) all have had their numbers retired.

But Torre isn't the only former Yankee who will be honored this summer. The team also announced ceremonies in which plaques will be hung in Monument Park for former right fielder Paul O'Neill (Aug. 9), first baseman Tino Martinez (June 21) and relief pitcher Goose Gossage (June 22). MARK OSBORNE

Torre will become the 17th number retired for 19 different people. In addition to No. 8 being retired twice, No. 42 is retired for Mariano Rivera and Jackie Robinson.
